Why are we assessing graduate attributes (GAs)?

Singapore Polytechnic (the oldest polytechnic in SG)

ESTABLISHED

1954

COURSES

37 Full-Time Diplomas
3 Common Entry Programmes
Polytechnic Foundation Programme
492 CET Programmes

GRADUATE OUTPUT

212,694 Graduates

STUDENT ENROLMENT

13,568 Full-time Diploma students
314 Polytechnic Foundation Programme students
62,123 CET training places

A polytechnic offers multiple pathways to learners (teens & adults)

- Students can find jobs with a diploma
- Students can go on to university with their diploma
- Students can choose to take a part-time diploma whilst working

Are our graduates ready for work, for the world, and for life?

Are our graduate attributes aligned with global shifts?

Global Shifts (I)

‘The 10 skills you need to thrive in the Fourth Industrial Revolution’ (WEF, 2016)

Global Shifts (II)

The realities of the Industry 4.0 will require IHLs to invest heavily in the development of new agile learners in future workforces by tackling improvements to education and training systems (World Economic Forum, 2018).

Even Programme for International Student Assessment is embracing holistic measurements of education to tackle creative thinking, trying to find ways to assess, and have students assess flexibility in thinking (Volante et al, 2019).

Global Shifts (III)

In the EU, there is a recognition that broader skills are needed to ensure graduate employability (Volante & Ritzen, 2016).

In NZ, a 'Future Ready Graduates' website provides a '4Es of Employability' framework to help students and teachers develop transformational practices.

In Singapore, an IPS report proposed a merger of the Ministry of Education with Ministry of Manpower (Yahya, 2019). Singapore has a 'SkillsFuture Generic Skills & Competencies' framework.

- Does s/he have the stamina and motivation to complete never-ending marathons across diverse terrains?
- Does s/he tailor his/her training regime according to his/her race?
- How does s/he train? Is it sustainable?
- Does s/he help others along the way?
- Does s/he race fairly?
- Does s/he know how to plan, manage, review and evaluate his/her own races?

SP Graduate Attributes (wef July 29, 2020)

1. Competency & Versatility
2. Communication & Collaboration
3. Creativity, Innovation & Enterprise
4. Ethics & Responsible Citizenry
5. Self-Directedness & Personal Effectiveness
6. Global Mindset

Multisource Feedback (MSF)

360-degree feedback, used widely since the 1990s amongst Fortune 500 companies, gathers feedback from supervisors, co-workers, subordinates, and other relevant third parties on one's performance in a holistic way.

From 2019, all medical interns in New Zealand will need to go through MSF at some stage during their two training years (Medical Council of NZ, n.d.). Feedback is gathered from a doctor's colleagues on their non-technical skills such as their professionalism, communication and teamwork.

Multisource Feedback (MSF)

Students, like professionals, may benefit from gaining a clearer understanding of their personal traits and how it compares to established norms (Pappas, 2013).

The Johari Window has been used extensively as a training tool to enhance self-awareness when one examines each of the quadrants with feedback given by others. This evaluation from multiple sources could help students understand their strengths and areas of improvement in the form of MSF.

Multisource Feedback (MSF)

One such MSF platform in the industry is Explorance's Blue 360 platform that allows customisation of the following depending on the data needed:

- “Downward” feedback i.e., from supervisors to employees;
- “Upward” feedback i.e., employees to supervisors;
- Peer evaluation;
- Self-evaluation of one’s performance

Is MSF Useful for Our Students?

“If you don’t have this report, how will you know where to work on? With this, I know where to start improving myself and it’ll be beneficial for me.”

“This tracks your growth and allows you to see how you’re growing and lets you identify areas that you can focus your growth on.”

“It highlights some of the weaknesses that I thought I had a strength in. It hurts that my lecturer rated me lower than I rated myself.”

“I feel that I’ve worked very hard, but my lecturer rated me ‘2’, so maybe I should work harder.”

“Yes, I can improve on myself after I know my weaknesses.”

“I want someone I trust and know me to process the report with me.”

Our Takeaways

1. A runner's true test is how s/he runs his/her marathon. The challenge is to develop effective tools to assess his/her run, such as giving him/her multisource feedback
1. We need buy-in from staff and students for a successful implementation of such multisource feedback surveys
1. Multisource feedback reports can be used as a developmental tool to heighten students' self-awareness, but they must be coached to know how to use such reports effectively
